Flashpoint Geoff Johns

Not a dream, not an imaginary story, not an elseworld. This is Flash Fact: When Barry Allen wakes at his desk, he discovers the world has changed. Family is alive, loved ones are strangers, and close friends are different, gone or worse. It's a world on the brink of a cataclysmic war - but where are Earth's Greatest Heroes to stop it? It's a place where America's last hope is Cyborg, who hopes to gather the forces of The Outsider, The Secret 7, SHAZAM!, Citizen Cold and other new and familiar-yet-altered faces! It's a world that could be running out of time, if The Flash can't find the villain who altered the time line!

ROAD TO HELL...

Indeed the road to hell is paved with good intentions.

Barry Allen (aka The Flash) just wanted to save his mom, whose have been murdered when he was still a kid and his father was wrongly accused for the crime.

He is the fastest man alive and he's able to travel through time, so the temptation of getting back to the past and saving his mom is too strong.

After all, saving his mom, avoiding that his dad would go to prison, all that is something positive, right? So, if he does it, nothing could come out wrong from that, right?

WRONG!!!

It's sad and tragic, but some bad things happened for a reason.

Also, nobody is an island, and your own impact, or the lack of it, can affect too many people around you, since if you aren't there to do what you did, nobody will do it, each decision is of each person, and nobody else.

ONLY ONE CUP PER CUSTOMER

It wasn't a timeline aberration, Barry wasn't correcting the timeline, for better or worse, his mom's death was a fact in the original timeline, so changing that would provoke gigantic repercussions, not only to his own personal life, not only his closest friends and allies, but for the entire world, and millions of lives will be lost.

Millions of lives, innocent lives, for saving only one life, maybe the most important life in your existence, but still sadly and unfairly, only one life can't justify millions of deaths.

Barry Allen must find a way to fix it and get back to the reality that he knew it before.

But...

...the worse of all?

Time is like a cup, if you break it, never will be the same, maybe you'd be extremely lucky of fix it in many details, BUT...

...small fragments will be lost forever and the crack will be impossible of making up entirely, you haven't a new cup, you can't do a new cup, it's the original cup, the only cup and it was broken, there isn't a glue good enough to erase the marks of the fracture.

What was, never will be the same, not matter how much you'd try it.

Villains are able to do terrible things...

...but ironically, heroes can do it worse.

(B+) 79% | Good

Notes: Wherein big names play plot devices and the universe, ironically, reboots with a story about restoring the status quo.

Anne says

So this is the lead-in for the New 52 re-boot?

Huh.

Well, it's not particularly bad, but it's not exactly mind-blowing, either. I can see why quite a few other reviewers were disappointed in it.

It had that squished together, forced out, and then squished together again kind of feel to it. Blah. It could have been so much better.

Possibly it just didn't work for me because I've always felt that The Flash was one of the least cool members of the Justice League. It takes a lot of work and a great storyline for me to be able to take him seriously.

I think this one will go down as Required Reading because of the re-boot, but beyond that it's nothing special.
